NUMBER 32.

NEW POSTOFFICE NEWS.

The question of a new postoffice is uppermost in the minds of many as to whether it shall be or whether it shall not be. Much controversy is afloat both pro and con in regard to its location.
It is understood that the present quarters are crowded on account of the decided increase in the postal business due largely to the parcel post branch installed in the past few years and is insufficiently lighted. For some little time past a new location with more adequate facilities has been looked for by the government.

Several proposals have been investigated, one of which is to enlarge the present office by adding the store next door. This could be done by removing the wall, adding the space into the postoffice both of which are a part of the same building, but it is understood the parties owning the building do not care to do so with the present uncertainty of retaining the contract after the 10 years' guarantee.

The present prospect and one which has been accepted by the federal representative is to have the new postoffice in the new cement building which is to be erected by F. H. Beck on the old Elm House site. It is understood that this new building will be used, on the front side by the street, for a postoffice, the rear part to be used for a garage and the second floor to be finished off for tenements.

A feature which is causing some uncertainty is the fact that the new building though accepted is by no means certain. The government insured the occupation of the ground front for postal purposes for ten years but the expense of postal appliances, makes it uncertain under the proposed term of occupation.

Some of the citizens of the town are pleased with the proposed change, some are indifferent and others, who work in the shoe factories or live at the lower part of the village, are not in favor because of the extra distance up town. A petition was drawn up recently protesting a change in the location of the postoffice and was being circulated by Stuart W. Goodwin and Lester Ashton, but since Mr. Goodwin has investigated conditions at the postoffice with postmaster, McCosker and the government official, he has decided that he sees wherein the change is needed and has ceased to circulate the petition, but the petition was at his office for any to sign who desired to. Mr. Ashton is not circulating his petition at present as he is away for a two weeks' vacation.

A few facts given by Winn Kimball follow:

The location suggested is not central is admitted by the protest that a great many citizens are making—this town does not need a new equipped Post Office there is very little, if any, more business being done except in the parcel post department, at present than in the days of the B. F. Spinney shoe factory and at that time this office handled the work well without talk of more room or finer equipment. The U. S. government will pay rent to owner of the building in which they place the postoffice, but they require that the owner buy outright $3000 worth of fixtures. Of what advantage is all this expense to us? Does it in any way help you or I in getting our mail? Does it increase the efficiency of the distribution of the mail? The greatest number of towns people live below the present location of this office and the suggested location brings it even farther away from a central location.
It would seem that the right location is one that serves the most people and that this is of more importance than the question of new fixtures.

The above is the expression of a few who have opinions on the matter. What is your opinion?

Andover's New High School
As we dropped into Charles Blake's lumber shop the other day, we noticed that a large number of windows were being crated for shipment and were told that they were going into the new school building at Andover, now under construction. Mr. Blake has the contract to furnish the doors, windows and interior finish, in fact everything but the rough lumber used in the building. The weather board is to be of spruce clapboard. The sashes are made of 1 1/2 inch California Sugar Pine set with a glass.

Mr. Blake showed us the plans and it looks like a well arranged building. It is a one story building with basement and cupola, and has the generous dimensions of 62 feet 8 inches by 39 feet, 10 inches. A long hall leads from the main entrance down through the central part of the building from which the high school room opens on the left with recitation room and laboratory on right. In the building there are 38 windows, 15 x 24, 12 light, 4 windows 30 x 44, 2 light, and 4 windows 24 x 44, 2 light. In the basement there are 32 sashes 15 x 15, 6 light.

BOYS ENJOY BANQUET IN TEXAS

Laredo, Texas
August 4, 1916.

Dear Sir:—

Last evening the Second Maine Regiment Band was invited out to a regular Mexican dinner by Mr. Richter, one of the wealthiest merchants of Laredo, who has taken a great interest in the band since its arrival. As this dinner was a little different from the Chinese, French and Italian dinners, which most everybody is familiar with, I'll try to give you an idea what it was like, and also of the good time that followed.

We gathered at Mr. Richter's residence at eight o'clock. After meeting Mrs. Richter and the six guests who were present, we were immediately ushered into their beautiful dining room, where we found their Mexican servants waiting impatiently to serve the dinner. In the center of their long dining table, which seated the entire party, was a large cactus, a characteristic of Texas, while half way between this plant and either end there was a large bouquet of roses, a characteristic of Maine. The menu was as follows:

Consomme a l'Ochre	Broiled Chicken with Rice	Bread
Tortilles	Olives	Baked Beans
Tomatoes	Peach Ice Cream	Celery
Chocolate Cake	Fancy Crackers

As you are probably not familiar with a few of the articles on the menu, I'll try to explain to you what they are. The term "Ochre" is the name of a plant grown here in Texas and is very much like the asparagus of Maine in both appearance and taste. As in case of the asparagus they use only the tips of the "ochre." "Tortilles" look very much like griddle cakes. These are made by making a paste of corn meal and water and then cooking them as you would griddle cakes. The Mexicans told us in the middle and use them as we do a fork, only they bite off a small portion of the "tortille" with each mouthful. We tried it but found we preferred getting them in a different way. We got along this far fairly well, but when the servants placed three large dishes of corn husks upon the table we really did not know what to think about it. These were the "tamales." Each of us took one, unwrapped the husk, and found inside what we would call chicken dressing or stuffing." Although the "tamales" were very highly spiced and red hot with peppers the boys managed to eat three a piece, but all agreed that it was the hottest "stuffing" they had ever had in their mouths. During the whole dinner the Mexican street orchestra played on the lawn in front of the house and this just put the finishing touch upon the whole affair.

After the meal was over the smokes were passed around and some of the boys went into the Mexican stage, while others went out onto the veranda and enjoyed Mr. Richter's stories of the battles fought across the river in New Laredo two years ago. At twelve o'clock our party broke up after enjoying the best time that we've had since our arrival here at Laredo. What you have an example of Texas hospitality.

A few days ago I was talking with the 2nd Maine chauffeur who makes three trips a week to the different Maine Battalions along the border and he informed me that all the companies were in fine condition and that the organization was something out of the ordinary now. This shows that the boys are all acclimated. Considering this fact and the fact that they have all received three inoculations for typhoid and a vaccination for small pox, I feel safe in saying that the 2nd Maine Regiment is now prepared to remain any length of time on the Mexican border.

As we have had quite a bit of trouble with the mail since our arrival here in Laredo, I wish to say a few things in regard to this. We have not found that our letters have never reached home and visa versa, so do not be alarmed if you do receive mail from the boys regularly. Another thing our mail has been mixed up with that of 2nd Missouri for the reason that the abbreviations "Me." and "Mo." look very much alike. Of course this is only a small matter, but if you will spell the word "Maine" out in full, it will save a delay in the delivery of our mail which occurs every day.

In order to get this letter into the afternoon mail I'll have to close. Hoping this reaches you in time for the next issue of the Advertiser, I remain
Sincerely yours,
Harry S. Lasselle.

Trained Local Road Builders.
It is expected that Norway's Main Street, the street that has been a byword and a reproach for years, will when completed, be a model in road building. Best of all, the work is being done by Norway citizens. This is not only an advantage financially but educationally, and will be a great assistance to the town in giving it scores of trained men in the needed science of road building, that will meet the requirements of this day and generation.

Republican Rally.
A Republican rally was held in the Opera House, Monday evening. Both men and women were present to hear the speakers and the singing of patriotic songs by Wynifred Staples Smith.

The speakers were introduced by Hon. J. A. Roberts as chairman. The speakers were Wallace H. White, candidate for representative from the second congressional district, Carl E. Milliken, candidate for governor, and Ex-governor Fernald, candidate for United States Senator for the short term.

Mr. White discussed the Mexican problem stating the attitude taken by Republicans and the provisions of the Republican platform for the protection of American lives.

Mr. Milliken likened the state of Maine to a business corporation with the governor as its business manager and showed in his discussion that a large bank balance at the end of an administration was not conclusive proof that the state was in a prosperous condition.

Mr. Fernald extolled the virtues of Oxford county and spent much of his time on the taxing question. General statistics showing that the present tariff was one of sectional favoritism and that it had been helped out by the war.

Wynifred Staples Smith sang several national airs, dressed in white, carrying an American flag. Music was also furnished by Shaw's orchestra.

To The Elm House Piazza.
Mrs. F. Q. Elliott, the other day while looking over some old papers, found one of March 25, 1898 in which appeared an item entitled "To The Elm House Piazza." It seems that Judge Davis, who was then the Judge of the Municipal Court wrote a poem, dedicating it to the piazza of the Elm House. The item reads that Judge Davis resided in the oratory of many of America's great speakers, and has sheltered numerous letters of fish stories. From that piazza in war time the bulletins of news from the front were read to the anxious people. So the judge thought it was fitting that the poem should be celebrated in verse. Here are the lines:

Where loafers their wonderful stories told
To the gaping crowd, both young and old;
Where they told the tales that they admired,
And shouted and roared for the biggest;
Where the men who once to Canada run
Bore battle and fought for the crown;
They cooling shade they no more shall know,
For vandal hands have laid these low.

Harry Rust, W. R. C.
Harry Rust, W. R. C. No. 45, held their regular meeting at Woodman Hall, Thursday evening. The attendance was unusually large for this season of the year. The whole dinner of the evening. The corps accepted an invitation to attend the campfire at Hebron, Friday of this week. It was voted to contribute the sum of $10 towards the Company D aid fund and by personal contribution raised the amount to over $20.

Committees were appointed for the harvest dinner and sale which is to be held October 11th for the benefit of the Monument fund.
Dinner committee—Mrs. Elizabeth Sampson, Edith Edwards, Mrs. G. O. Bennett, Mrs. Susan Wentzel, Mrs. P. H. Beck, Mrs. A. J. Thompson, Mrs. R. H. Beck, Rosetta Judkins, Mrs. Eva Fogg, Gandy White—Carrie Tucker, Mrs. Lida Richardson, Mrs. Alice Thurston, Mrs. Refreshments of ice cream and fancy cookies were served after the work. The next meeting will be held August 17, at 8 o'clock and full attendance is requested in fine condition and that the organization was something out of the ordinary now. This shows that the boys are all acclimated. Considering this fact and the fact that they have all received three inoculations for typhoid and a vaccination for small pox, I feel safe in saying that the 2nd Maine Regiment is now prepared to remain any length of time on the Mexican border.

Alumni Reunion.

The Norway High school and Norway Liberal Institute Alumni Reunion will be held on Wednesday, August 16. This one is going to be the best one ever.

An extra fine program has been arranged for the afternoon at the school house, a sumptuous banquet will be served with after dinner speeches at the Grange hall, and Pettengill's orchestra will give a concert followed by a ball at the Opera House directly after the banquet. Herefore there has been considerable misunderstanding and injured feelings concerning the matter of membership in the association. The following article of the constitution will explain just who the members entitled to participate in the business meetings and social functions of the association. "Article III, Membership. The membership shall be composed of the graduates of Norway High School and ex-students of the Norway Liberal Institute. The teachers shall be honorary members of the association."

Amendment to Article III. "All past and present members of the School Board and Superintendents shall be honorary members of the association. Pupils attending this school one year or more shall become associate members of the association, but shall not be eligible to vote."

The committee in charge of sending out the invitations have endeavored to reach every graduate of the Norway High School with an invitation, but as no adequate record has been kept of the students of the Norway Liberal Institute it has been impossible to furnish them with the printed invitations and programs of events.

Why not write a personal letter to the members of your class telling them that you will be there and that you would like to see them again in the old familiar surroundings? To grasp that old classmate by the hand again and look into his eyes is worth all of your effort.

HAS SOUTH PARIS FOUND THE SAME?

The Answer is Found in the Straight-forward Statement of a South Paris Resident.

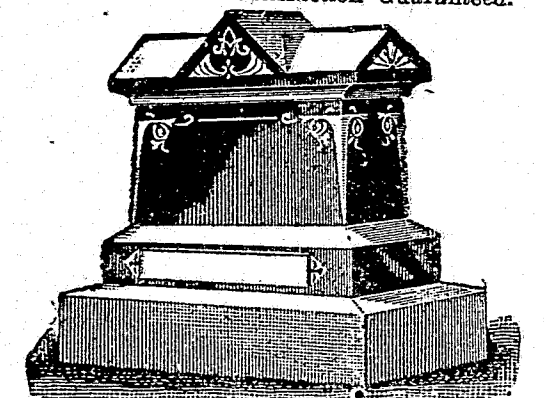

We have been reading week after week in the local press of Norway, citizens who have been rid of distressing kidney and bladder troubles by Doan's Kidney Pills, and we have often wondered whether the same high opinion of this medicine is to be found in our neighboring towns. This frank and earnest statement of a well-known and respected resident of South Paris will set this doubt at rest.

James H. Perry, painter, Pleasant St., South Paris, Me., says: "I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills as I have used them with very fine results. I took four boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills, and they gave me prompt relief from pains across my back. Since then, I have been practically free from the trouble. Occasionally, however, I use a few of Doan's Kidney Pills and they keep my kidneys in a strong condition."

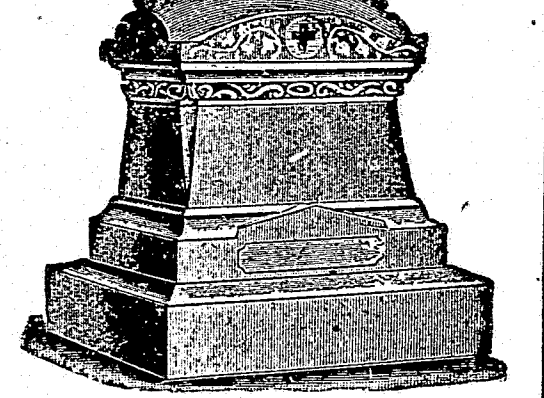

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Perry had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y. 31-32

SCENES OF CHILDHOOD.

This morning I got out of bed and went to visit the old farm. I remembered the best part of my childhood's day.

Where once I lived in childhood's day, And soon I called on Mr. Brown. Where once I lived in childhood's day, And soon I called on Mr. Brown.

Where I brought water half a mile, And hunted woodchucks with the dogs, And sipped sweet sap from a wooden spile.

Back where I hunted crows and quail And loaded my gun with shingle nails And fired my ramrod into the air.

It fell to the earth, I never knew where. The sun shone just as bright, Beneath the water and the clouds.

Birds sang as in days of yore, And picked and dickered on the shore. Where once I caught the lusty trout

And hooked the lazy suckers out, And heathered the scent of new mown hay And hunted the cows that had gone astray.

And down the valley my voice did ring, I knelt and drank from the mineral spring. I found it not that self-same joy, As once I used to when a boy.

After school and lessons learned, I sat outside the water and the clouds. Where the honeysuckle used to twine Around the dear old home of mine.

Today my eyes with tears are dim, When I think of one just over the hill. For many years her form has laid Beneath the willows that pass away.

The buttercup tree where we played, And the English poplar has decayed. Where I laughed and romped the whole day long.

In childhood's days now past and gone, The old scene with its path is grim, The roof is slowly falling.

The walls are going to decay, And all that's left will pass away. Let me go back to the day of yore, To her dear hand that smoothed my brow.

Ah, I seem to see her now! Back to my youth and golden prime, Back from the onward march of time, Back to the best days after all.

Those were the best days after all. Copyright 1916. Frederick M. Davis.

A WORK-A-DAY WORLD.

This is a work-a-day world on its axis is whirled. As it travels its orbit around.

Do you know any out of the many? A better one ever has found? We often get weary, there are days that are dreary.

And friends will seem distant and cold; We still cling to it through bitter strife. Unwilling to own we are tired.

Yet old Father Time will ring out the chime Of the years that once went by. Where evergreens creep some day we shall sleep.

Or awake this mystery to know. Which Shall it be, to Sleep or Awake? We shall find it out through life beyond the vale.

May youth, hope and trust our hearts never leave. Through life's journey to the end. The lowering clouds may dim the stars.

To the gloom of the darkest night, They will float away on the morning breeze. And dissolve in the sunshine bright.

The withered sprigs and frost-seared leaves May sleep 'neath the ice and snow. When the winter winds blow.

There'll be bloom and sadness in all lives. To trouble and sorrow we are born; They will pass like the passing of night.

And joy will come in the morning. The leathsome worm that wriggles along, For awhile 'neath the cloud may lie—

It will rise again in color bright. With wings that are fashioned to fly. Shall man, of all God's creatures be left?

His soul's longings unsatisfied? Of immortality be heaf! For whom was said the Christ has died.

HARRY FARRAR, South Paris.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

Yes, Jim, you are gone, Best heart in all the land. It made a man feel proud To take your hand.

Heaven bless you, Jim. We know just where you be, Taking your rest long side o' God, That's where you be.

And you have earned it, Jim, And ever a man earned pay, Playing the "Pipes o' Pan" Day after day.

Comin' sick and poor And them with hearts most broke, Till the clouds all rolled away And the sun came out.

Rolling away the stones That set the doors o' hearts; Chasing away the tears And aches and smart.

Speaking o' hearts, the latching "Was 'A hanging from a tree" O' yours, all the time, Jim, and more, Was pulsing free.

For all that pulled the string up, He of de. It's still, now, Jim, and cold, But folks will love you.

Till the world grows old. That heart o' yours, And too big and full And folks kept dressing it.

A steady plod, Till it stopped, Jim. Guess the old world Without you walk rather lame.

Without you in it to brace it up. Your life, Jim, was a loving cup, Filled with rich, red wine.

And the foam and sparkle Was just sublime. But I reckon God needed Someone like you.

Away up there, Jim, So He had the right. But I'd a put up a putty stiff fight If I'd been them doctors.

To keep you here, Cause this old world needed Your cheer. But you left us "Griggsby Station," Jim, And other things.

That will bind you to us With chains of gold, Till the earth wear out And the stars grow cold.

So we wait, Jim, And try to "take care" Of ourselves, old pal, Till we meet up there. Waterbury, Conn.

Wandering Wayside Notes

of Doubtful Public Interest. Printed to Amuse the Writer.

We motored to Bridgton recently. That's the word, "motored." Ben Hosmer at the wheel.

We went the shortest way going from Woodchuck Corner over the twin bridges and Hall Hill. This piece of road is simply "awful" and the approaches to the bridge are scandalous and dangerous. Otsfield has not repaired this road and probably won't, yet they are liable to heavy damage and are taking chances beyond a reasonable risk. Something should be done. Will it be? Yes, by and by.

Much of the travel goes via Ryefield Bridge near Bolster's Mills, making possibly two miles farther, but a better road. With the amount of business between Norway, Harrison and the Bridgtons this detour should be permitted and Otsfield should be compelled to put the road going the shortest distance in passable shape and to keep it so. It can be done.

A call was made on B. C. Walker, Esq. and he was not in his office, neither was Judge A. H. Walker or his young partner, Bennie Pike. We took possession of the office and waited a while for clients, but none came. We are sorry to learn that Ed Walker's health is not good and he comes to the office only occasionally. The Judge's health is excellent and he was attending a bank director's meeting, hence his absence from the office.

Major Henry A. Shorey does not look a day older than he did twenty years ago and walks equally as well, as far as we could see. He grows harder and harder of hearing and it was difficult to make him understand us when using an ear trumpet. He sized us up for E. B. Hastings, Esq. of Fryeburg. This pleased and flattered us, but how it would effect Mr. Hastings, we won't say. Editor Shorey is an old fashioned newspaper man, indulging in political editorials set two columns wide and if he can't hear all that's going, he writes well and his articles are extensively copied. He is the last one of the old school of journalism left in the state. Long may he live and write!

We think this style of writing is a waste of space and should refrain from telling him so to his face as he might show us the door or hand us a cigar. The Bridgton News is an old fashioned office very similar to the one in which we commenced the printer's trade 45 years ago. Take out the cylinder press and you'd have it. No doubt there is a dismantled "dry press" somewhere in it, but we didn't happen to see it.

We returned from Bridgton via North Bridgton, South and East Waterford. The road was much better this way. Distance for the round trip was 40 miles. Bridgton is something of a town anyhow. It has good streets and sidewalks. Its got a sheep skin tannery and hemlock bark is used—there is a similar tannery at Canton, Me., and these are the only two tanneries of any kind we know of in this State. Probably there are others. Norway had a big upper leather tannery employing many people but changes in the tanning process made it unprofitable and when a business fails to be profitable you have the result.

Bridgton has two or more woolen mills running full capacity, city water, electric lights and a beautiful monument to the hero-dead of '61-'65. This was presented them by the Cleaves boys who were raised in town and made their money and got their fame in Portland and were soldiers and politicians. Henry became Gov. of the State and was respected and honored by everybody in the Republican party and a few in the Democratic party. They gave them a monument anyhow and the Cleaves boys threw a fit because it wasn't located on the spot it selected. We remember it. We express no opinion as to which was the better location. It's a beautiful monument and well located and all Bridgtongians proudly point to it and tell the story to the stranger. Well they might. It's credit to the town and to the Cleaves family and the brave boys who fell in that awful struggle.

Bridgton is in advance of many towns as much as the able selection for three years' term. This is as it should be. One town father elected each year and a continuous board of officers. The citizen and taxpayer like it but the politician and manipulating promoter dislike it. There are some miles of good roads in this town. Many more than in Norway. Why? They expend more money intelligently and have better material to use, yet not all the highways are turpiked boulevards in this town and there is opportunity for much improvement and expenditure of money.

Here you see a "narrow gauge railway" which is just a little better and freight rates a little cheaper than that resulting from the use of mules and horses. The road ends at Harrison. There was talk of extending through the Waterford to East Stoneham and perhaps further, but little has been heard of this late year. The Maine Central has bought this road and that corporation isn't extending narrow gauge railways to any large extent.

The electric light plant is owned principally by a local company we understand but the time is not far distant we believe when it will be controlled by the Maine Electric Octopus as it's in the line of their operation. It may be of advantage to the town. The price now paid per kilowatt-hour is unknown to us.

Two papers are published. One comes from Portland and the other is the News which has handed out the local and the political views of its venerable editor for more than 40 years to our knowledge. That the field is sufficiently large for two papers we question. Papers must pay the owner or they don't stay long. That is the rule.

Highland lake is one of the beauty spots of Maine, nothing prettier lays outdoors and the view from the Highland is immense. This section should be over-run with summer visitors and judging from what we saw we believe Bridgton has its full share of non-resident school teachers and guests.

It was a hard blow for the town when the Bridgton House burned. Fryeburg suffered a similar loss. These houses don't rebuild simply because they couldn't be profitable. You can't get capital unless you can show a return on it and big hotels in these towns while desirable, were not profitable, hence they were not rebuilt and will not be rebuilt this generation—forget their losses.

This is the way of business and business at a profit is the making of towns and individuals, whether in Bridgton, Fryeburg or any way.

Some communities have what is called "enterprise" which, being interpreted, means that its citizens are induced to put in their good money in unproductive enterprises for the sake of helping the thing along and they cherish the hope that somehow in the dim future a return will come to them. That is enterprise. A fire or insolvency proceedings comes and wipes it out and this crop of enterprising citizen are done for until they forget it.

We are wandering from the subject and must return to Waterford Flat where the Shattuck Water Cure thrived for nearly fifty years, and when the remarkable individualism of the good doctor was spent the Water Cure ceased to be and the buildings were turned into a summer hotel. Mr. Dudley and wife have made some money, so did Dr. Shattuck in his day.

Artemus Ward (C. E. Brown) made money and fame delivering his droll lectures and died at 32. He was born and schooled in Waterford and played hide and seek with the patients in the Water Cure and to-day you have to tell who and what of Artemus as the people have forgotten him. He's buried here, also his mother, Caroline Brown, we never heard anything about his father, but have supposed that he once had one and presume he too is buried in Elm Vale Cemetery.

Artemus learned the printer's trade in our office when his brother owned the paper, and of course we can't forget him, though we never have seen him, yet we have read his last will and testament which is the greatest joke he ever put over on the public.

The original will is in the Probate Office at South Paris. You should see it. Albert Park will show it. Albert is the register of probate and has been for more than a score of years. He is a good county official even if he is an auctioneer and a loud talking republican, filled with anecdotes, stories and advice to the relating of which you must respectfully listen, but you can see the original will of Artemus if you ask him. No doubt of it.

Many cottages adorn the shores of lake Keoka and the boats of anxious and patient fishermen and some women are seen on its surface. Salmon, trout, and bass are caught, also pickled and bull-heads. The latter fish by many is held in high esteem. We consider it the best pan fish of the lot, but opinions and taste vary in different individuals.

The Knight Memorial Library is cute. It's something to be proud of and no doubt it is appreciated by summer guests and natives as it contains therein many volumes of popular fiction which are in good demand. We don't believe in public libraries, it makes people lazy and girls refuse to cook and wash dishes as it encourages with novel reading. We remember the time when dime novels were not considered fit for young people to read and if the reading was indulged in by the grown-ups it was done slyly when the young folks were away or in bed.

Conditions have changed and our libraries are filled with abominably unreason-able romances on which we feed the youths and make them shiftless and lazy. This beautiful stone library building next to the little store where the Misses Knight earned and saved money for this building is a splendid commentary of their thrift and the patient painstaking industry of their lives.

Norway has just such a useless institution, costing its taxpayers seven hundred dollars per year, and for what? Ninety per cent. of all books taken are time-killing and mind destroying fiction. Peterville has a new mill. The old one in which Peter Haskell made a competency went up in smoke and down in ashes some years ago and Rolfe has built a new and better one.

The McWain Packing Co's buildings at Rice's Junction look prosperous. They are of sheet iron veneer structure and of modern design. This company and the planters have made a little money in years past. It's probable this year's crop of sweet corn will be small. About the usual acreage of corn has been planted but the late spring, cold and wet June indicates a small yield. A warm August and September with late coming frost may yet save the crop. This kind of weather would mean many thousands of dollars to Maine planters and packers. Let us hope for it.

Prof. George C. Yeaton, orchard demonstrator, is our authority for saying that the corn raising season has diminished thirty days in the past thirty years. That is, the time between the last frost in the Spring and the first frost in September, thirty days less. This means earlier matured sweet corn or the going out of the corn packing industry.

Our story is told and we quit.

SCARCITY OF FARM HELP

The farmers of the country feel very keenly this summer the lack of farm help. Their supply of labor has always been considerably augmented by immigration. This year immigration has been reduced to the vanishing point as the result of the war.

Last summer there was still some business depression. A large number of young fellows unable to find work in the cities decided to try the rake and the pitchfork. This year it has been a very busy winter and spring and the unemployed are largely by choice.

Alien help has never been popular on the farms. The farmer is a man of few words, and he is irritated by long explanations to a foreigner who can't grasp the simplest language. When he sends the hired man up to the barn for a moving machine, it is not a little bothersome when he returns with a monkey wrench. But almost any pair of willing hands is accepted nowadays.

Formerly the boys used to stay on the farm and help the old man along. There were more of them too. Now not merely are families smaller, but the boys want to go away to college and school. Furthermore, stimulated by high prices, the farmer has planted every possible acre to growing crops. For many it is the chance of a life-time to get the mortgage finally paid off, and build a garage and put an automobile in it.

There will be many a farm in the remote country where the women folks will get out on rush days. It would not be considered good form in the more advanced sections. But in many lonely spaces the neighbors are not critical. And it is a fair guess that the women will hoe and rake faster than the average farm hand.

If the peas are freshly picked, wash a dozen pods carefully and put them to cook with the peas in a small amount of salted water. Leave uncovered and cook until tender—about 20 minutes. Overcooking destroys both the natural flavor and color. Remove the pods, season the peas with butter and a sprinkling of sugar.

KEZAR FALLS.

Republican Rally.

The Saco Valley Republican Club held a highly successful rally, Saturday. The day was auspicious and the spacious lawn in front of Orman Stanley's residence was covered with settlers for the convenience of the public. Many of the buildings were decorated and the National colors waved over all. The flag over the speakers' stand held special interest for many as it was first used in the campaign of 1860 and was bequeathed to the town by that ardent and aged Republican, Thomas Randall, long since gone to his reward.

The Kezar Falls Fire and Drum corps which has summoned the town on different occasions for many years led off and was followed by Dr. R. R. Chellis, marshal of the day and the Kezar Falls brass band who escorted the speakers and the members of the different committees to the speaker's stand. Rev. Cymbrid Hughes as chairman, introduced the speakers who were enthusiastically received and highly applauded.

BUILD THE MAINTENANCE INTO THE ROAD.

Road building vitally concerns every taxpayer and every automobile owner. A right policy makes the road tax productive. It satisfies those who pay and those who use. A faulty policy antagonizes both.

There are two alternatives in road building; 1st—To build at low initial cost a road that requires periodical maintenance, aggregating in a few years time more than the original cost, and 2nd—to build at greater initial cost a road whose maintenance is almost negligible.

The first road is in good condition for only a portion of the period between times of repair, representing perhaps a percent of maximum efficiency. The second, requiring only attention to minor faults which do not affect at all the smoothness of travel, offers 100 per cent. efficient service—365 days of the year.

The first permits greater initial mileage but heavy annual maintenance charges eventually prevent new roads being built, as road funds must be used to keep the original mileage in passable condition, leaving little for new work. The second requires a little greater investment and therefore heavier interest charges but these amount to but a fraction of the maintenance charges on the cheaper road—leaving a generous share of the annual road appropriations for new work. This is building the maintenance into the road.

Building roads that are not permanent with long term bond issues is an economic blunder. The roads are gone while the bonds still demand annual payment of interest and eventual refunding by a general tax on the community. If, through costly maintenance, they have been kept in reasonable condition, the total of initial cost, interest and maintenance is too great, and the burden of refunding has been passed on to a generation already burdened by excessive maintenance.

Permanent Roads built by bond issues maturing within the reasonable expectation of life of the road, represent least cost to the taxpayers, at five, ten, or twenty years. Each year of road service, the heaviest expense with the cheaper type, has been built into the road.

Wayne County, Mich., is spending annually an average of about $30.00 per mile to maintain the surface of its 128 miles of concrete roads. Of them in their seventh year of service. Auto traffic is exceedingly heavy. Certain Eastern states whose policy was in the past to build permanent roads are spending $500 to $1000 per year to keep their roads passable. Without this costly maintenance, the heavy automobile traffic would soon make them impassable.

Communities which have a big proportion of permanent roads are helpless. The roads must be maintained and the costs are rising steeply as auto traffic increases. Maintenance is even now being paid out of the proceeds of bond issues which should go only for new work. But it is significant to note that the new construction is with more permanent materials.

The plain lesson for communities having heavy traffic is to build permanently. It is better to add a small annual mileage of low maintenance roads than to gamble with the future on a less satisfactory type. It has already proven costly.

Earth and gravel roads have their place as feeders to the main highways and for districts too sparsely populated to finance better construction. Light traffic does not demand more.

But where traffic is heavy and the community demands good roads it is economic wisdom to build permanently—a blunder to build less well, for permanence means least cost.

SUMMER RESORT FRIENDSHIP

To many people one of the most attractive features of the vacation is the making of new friends at summer hotels and other meeting places. It is surprising how intimate one can become in a few hours with some entirely unknown person. You reveal a lot of intimate facts about your life history which you would never tell to some one in his own town.

After associating with new found friends for a few weeks, one seems greatly have to enriched his life. It seems as if this new acquaintance was to be a permanent addition to one's circle of intimates. One parts from the new friend with warm purpose to write frequently and visit each other's homes.

But usually these friendships prove very transient. They are not rooted in any real experience of life. People are brought together by the mere accident of vacation wanderings and talk to each other to kill time, but no great bond is created. Usually with such acquaintances a letter or so is exchanged, which soon drops to a post card, and then silence.

Yet the meeting with strangers in this way has its very decided value. The friendship may be nothing one has time or energy to keep, but at least you get some point of view entirely outside your own circle that should give some new ideas about life.

Some people travel in solemn silence, never exchanging a word with those who occupy with them the hotel piazza or a railroad car seat. Others are looking for new human contacts, and anxious to get some new point of view. This seems much the better course. A little display of companionship often puts one in touch with most interesting people, who have had novel experiences. One can learn much more on a journey from his fellow travelers than he can from any guide books. Business men get valuable ideas about trade in this way, and home interests are a welcome ground for women to meet on.

CANNING FRUIT WITHOUT SUGAR

Fruit for use in pies or salads or as stewed fruit can be put up as canned without the use of any sugar at all, according to the canning specialists of the department. They, therefore, advise those who, because of the high price of sugar, have been thinking of reducing the amount of fruit they put up, to can as much of their surplus as possible by the use of boiling water when sugar syrup is beyond their means. Any fruit, they say, may be successfully sterilized and retained in the pack by simply adding boiling water instead of the hot syrup.

The use of sugar, of course, is desirable in the canning of all kinds of fruits and makes a better and ready sweetened product. Moreover, most of the fruits when canned in water alone do not retain their natural flavor, texture and color as well as fruits put up in syrup.

Fruit coming without sugar to be used for sauces or desserts must be sweetened.

Can the product the same, and it is picked. Cull, stem, or seed, clean the fruit by placing it in a strainer and pouring water over it until it is clean.

Place the product thoroughly in glass jars or tin cans until they are full; use the handle of a tablespoon, wooden ladle, or table knife for packing purposes. Pour over the fruit boiling water from a kettle place rubbers and caps in position, partially seal if using glass jars, seal completely if using tin cans. Place the containers in a sterilizing vat such as a wash boiler with false bottom, or other receptacle improvised for the purpose. If using a hot water bath outfit, process for 30 minutes; count time after the water has reached the boiling point; the water must reach the highest jar in container.

After sterilizing remove packs, seal glass jars, wrap in paper to prevent bleaching and store in a dry, cool place.

Our Nearest Neighbor. The year 1916 reminds us that our nearest neighbor, Greenwood, has reached the century mark. The town of Greenwood was first settled in 1802 and was incorporated as a town Feb. 5, 1815. Woodstock was incorporated Feb. 7, 1815 so the two towns are just about of an age and are so much alike in many respects that they would pass for twin towns.

The geographical features of the towns are very much the same in the sense that both towns nestle amid the grandest hills and mountains and most beautiful little lakes of Oxford county. Woodstock and Greenwood are alike in another respect, in that the business and office centers of each town has a different name from the town itself. Locke's Mills and Bryant Pond taking their names from the first settlers.

Side by side for the past one hundred years, the two towns have made progress together. We have known each other and have always been the best of friends. It is doubtful if any other two rural towns in Maine have made greater progress within the past ten or fifteen years than Greenwood and Woodstock, and the future is full of promise for both. The good old town of Woodstock with its beautiful little village of Bryant Pond sends its congratulations and best wishes to the good old town of Greenwood with its beautiful little village of Locke's Mills, and trust that the two may bring even greater and better things to our nearest neighbor with whom we have lived beside for so many years and now we are all waiting for the day when we can all go to Locke's Mills and help Greenwood celebrate its birthday. The people of Greenwood came over so loyally in 1915 and helped Woodstock celebrate hers.

Badly injured.

Edward Wilson, aged about 30, a passenger on Grand Trunk train, west bound train No. 1, was run over at the Bryant's Pond station Tuesday evening and received injuries which may prove fatal.

Identification of the man was established by an employment agency ticket in his pocket, but his home is unknown.

Skipping the colt's feed is an easy method of throwing away money, especially when the price of draft horses is growing higher each season. The feed and the care a colt gets the first year and a half determines what it will be at maturity. Encourage the colt to eat early, preferably feeding crushed oats and bran in equal parts. Let the colt have alfalfa and clover hay as soon as he will eat it. Maximum growth comes from feeding some grain with pasture grass.

WEST PARIS.

Mrs. Lorinda S. Curtis. Mrs. Lorinda Starbird Curtis passed away Sunday afternoon at her late home, after a long illness. Although she has been able to be around the house and out on the piazza until the last. Sunday she was taken with a bad spell and died very suddenly.

Mrs. Curtis was a daughter of Stephen R. and Abigail Andrews Starbird and was born Feb. 9, 1844 in Woodstock.

She married Levi T. Lurvey and they had children, Mary, the late Mrs. Frank McKenney and George Lurvey of Portland. After Mr. Lurvey's death, she married Davis P. Curtis, who died June, 1911. Albumen for Sealing.

An envelope that cannot be opened except by tearing or cutting the paper can be made by substituting albumen for the mucilage with which the flap is sealed.

An ordinary envelope can be opened by exposing it to steam for a few moments or by moistening it with water. Albumen becomes insoluble when heated.

Of course one must put the albumen on an ungunned envelope. If this be not easily obtained, it can be made from any sheet of paper, cutting this to the proper size and shape.

To apply the albumen, take some white of egg and spread it with a brush or feather or the tip of the finger on the flap. Close this before the albumen has time to dry and pass a hot iron over it. This coagulates the albumen, and the paper must be torn before the envelope can be opened.

RHUBARB RECIPES.

Spiced Rhubarb—This will be found an excellent relish to serve with cold meats when a pickle that is different is desired. Take 5 pounds of rhubarb, washed and sliced, add 1 pint of vinegar, 4 pounds of brown sugar and 2 teaspoons each of whole cloves and allspice, tied in a small cheesecloth bag. Boil in a preserving kettle steadily for 40 minutes and turn into jelly glasses. Cover when cold with melted paraffine.

Preserved Rhubarb with Nuts—This is a delicious preserve to use as a filling for afternoon tea sandwiches. Peel and cut up rhubarb; boil with a little water until reduced to a pulp and allow 1 pound of sugar, 1 ounce of almonds (blanched and chopped) and ½ a slice lemon to each pound of the fruit pulp. Put slowly in a hot granite saucepan and stir frequently to prevent scorching; then remove the lemon and seal air-tight in small glass jars.

Rhubarb Pie—Cut up a bundle of skinned rhubarb into small pieces and steam it gently with a heaping cup of sugar. When the fruit is very tender add the juice of ½ a lemon; mash well and turn into a large mixing bowl. Place on the ice and when chilled beat in the stiffly whipped white of 1 egg and 1 cupful of double cream that has been beaten solid. Whip the whole with an egg beater and fill into a glass bowl that has been lined with slices of sponge cake or halved lady fingers. Serve immediately.

Rhubarb with Figs—Take 6 pounds of rhubarb weighed after it is peeled and cut 1 pound of figs 5 pounds of sugar and 1 ½ of a pound of candied lemon or orange peel. Arrange the fruit and sugar in alternate layers in a large preserving kettle and stew over the top the candied peel. Cover the kettle, boil slowly for 1 hour, then remove the lid and boil slowly for 1 hour. A sharp knife or scissors may be used to cut the figs into strips.

Delicious Rhubarb Pie—Make a crust after your favorite recipe and line a medium deep tin. Take 1 cupful sugar, ½ cupful flour and ½ teaspoonful strawberry or lemon flavoring, mixing all thoroughly. Spread half the mixture over the bottom of the pie. Cut enough tender rhubarb in short lengths to fill the pan full. Sprinkle the remainder of flour and sugar over and into the pie, then put on the top crust. Crimp closely and leave plenty of air holes in the top. Bake rather slowly, till a rich brown. This pie will be juicy, sweet and the fruit of a delicious pink color delightfully flavored. It will not boil over or be too dry.

Canned Rhubarb—Cold Process—Peel the older rhubarb and cut all into half inch lengths. Have ready enough sterilized jars with new lids and rubbers. Put a pound of the cut rhubarb into a stone jar and pound till the juice flows freely. Fill this into a can and add enough unbroken fruit till the cans are filled in the same way. Use no sugar or water. The acid in the fruit will keep it perfectly provided you have the cans running over full and no air bubbles are allowed to exist between chunks of fruit. Gentle stirring with a silver spoon while pouring in the juice will let whatever air there is in the jar escape.

Rhubarb and Strawberry Jam—Cut 2 pounds of rhubarb in short lengths. Mash 2 quarts of strawberries, add 3 pounds of granulated sugar and pour over the rhubarb. Let stand overnight in a stone jar. Next morning put on in granite saucepan and simmer gently for 1 hour. Let cool partly and fill into jelly or preserve glasses. When perfectly cold cover with paraffine.

Rhubarb and Orange Marmalade—Pare 9 large or 12 small oranges and cut into small pieces. Cut 2 pounds of granulated sugar. Cut 2 pounds of rhubarb fine and put all into a granite preserving kettle. Simmer gently for 1 hour. Let cool partly and fill into jelly or preserve glasses. When perfectly cold cover with paraffine.

BIG HAY CROP.

Maine Farmers Will Harvest Nearly 2,000,000 Tons This Year.

Maine farmers are harvesting a big hay crop. The rainy weather of May and June and the warmer weather that has followed have combined to help produce one of the heaviest crops of hay that has been gathered in recent years. The total crop in the State will probably be well toward 2,000,000 tons. Particularly heavy is the crop on the low lands, but the problem of cutting and making and getting it into the barn is acute in many instances. The heavy rains have raised the lakes, ponds and streams, and have submerged many of the meadows that have been a big source of supply for the hay used on farms. With these under water or partially so, it can be seen that the farmer faces no easy task in getting his crop from these fields.

But on the higher points the hay crop is also heavy, and there is prospect of records being reached if not surpassed. Maine's average yield of hay per acre is about one and a quarter tons, and the appearance of hay already down and ready to take in will average much above this. On some farms that have made their first cutting of hay the fields would appear to average three tons to the acre and there are some instances where this will be exceeded.

The automobile tourist who remembers that the Latin "de" has a meaning of "taking from" is firmly convinced that a "detour" is something that takes the joy out of a tour.—Boston Herald.

The tourists should worry, especially in Maine, where the detours are numerous. All our detours may not be in the best of condition, but the most of them add rather than take from the joy of the tour, because they take one off the beaten track and reveal new points of interest.

Farm Demonstrations.
Within the next few weeks there are scheduled several farm demonstrations to take place in Oxford County, which will be of special interest and great value to the farmers.

During the past few years these demonstrations have increased in interest under the supervision of Prof. Geo. Keaton, who is the Oxford County agent of the University of Maine extension service.

The first demonstration will be held Thursday, August 17th at the farm of C. L. Case at Paris Hill. A very interesting and profitable program has been arranged which will include a talk on "The value of keeping accounts." Constance Warren of Watford will tell what she has done in her demonstration orchard and give a demonstration of grafting and budding the young trees. Prof. Keaton will also give a talk on marketing fruits.

A picnic lunch will be enjoyed at noon with coffee furnished at the Case house. A demonstration will also be held Tuesday, August 29th at R. M. Eastman's, Spring Hill Stock farm at Lovell.

Given to Many Words—Who was it?

The first man said:
"The object to be attained is something that will adhere firmly and at the same time is impervious to water."
"Yes, yes, I see," said the second man, "You want something to stick hard and not wet through."
The last is brevity of speech but expressive.
